An Obstinate Conscript.

Last year, writes the Rome correspondent of the Philadelphia Bulletin, there was a youth who declared he might draw the bad number or not, he would not be a soldier; he did draw the bad number and still he declared that he would not be a soldier. After having drawn it he returned home, and there he stayed until he was fetched by force. He followed the sergeant who had been sent for him, declaring all the time that it was useless to force him, because he would not be a soldier. He passively allowed himself to be stripped for the examination, without helping the operation by a finger. When he was told to put on his uniform he refused, saying he would not be a soldier. He was shut up alone in a room with the uniform, but when they went to see how far the toilette had progressed, they still found him standing, Adam-like in the middle of the room, with the uniform where they had laid it. They could not leave him there, as you may imagine, so they dressed him, he remaining quite passive, as usual; but when they put the gun into his hands, he sternly refused to touch it, saying it was contrary to his convictions to carry any murderous weapon. In vain they tried to reason with him, but they might as well have appealed to a stone. They took him to the Captain, where he repeated the same thing—that he would never touch a gun in his life. "You may do what you will with me," he said; "I am not afraid of death, but I will kill no man!" They put him into prison, and kept him on bread and water; they threatened, they coaxed and did all they could to persuade him, but it was useless. He only replied: "I will never hold or use a gun. I will kill no man; I will not be a soldier!"

I was never able to learn what they finally did with him, although I had the story from the Prefect's Secretary, charged with drawing the conscription.

No Apologies for Dinner.

Apologies for a poor dinner are generally out of place. But when a forgetful husband, who, without warning, brings a dozen guests home to sit down to a plain family dinner for three or four, it is not in human nature to keep absolute silence.

What to say and how to say it form the problem. Mrs. Tucker, the wife of Judge Tucker of Williamsburg, celebrated for her wit, ease, grace of manner and beauty, solved this problem years ago. He temper and tact were put to the proof one court day, when the judge brought with him the accustomed half score or more of lawyers, for whom not the slightest preparation had been made, the judge having quite forgotten to remind his wife that it was court day, and she herself having overlooked the fact.

The dinner was served with elegance, and Mrs. Tucker made herself very charming. On leaving the guests to their wine she said,—

"Gentleman, you have dined to day with Judge Tucker; promise me that will all dine to-morrow with me."

This was her apology; whereupon the gentlemen all swore that such a wife was beyond price. The judge then explained the situation, and the next day there was a noble banquet.

Moral: Never worry a guest with apologies for a poor dinner.
